

George Bory is a managing director for the Fixed Income Strategy and Product Specialists team at Wells Fargo Asset Management (WFAM). In this capacity, he focuses on enhancing WFAM's fixed-income client and prospect engagement model and oversees the product specialist team members. George joined the team from Wells Fargo Securities, where he served as a managing director and head of fixed-income research and earlier as head of credit strategy. Before this, George served as the global head of Credit Strategy for UBS Securities. Previous roles include working for J.P. Morgan Investment Management, where he held several positions, including serving as a senior credit portfolio manager. He began his investment industry career as a credit analyst for Fleet Financial Group. George earned a bachelor's degree in economics, graduating cum laude, from Siena College and completed the London School of Economics' General Course. He has earned the right to use the Chartered Financial Analyst® (CFA®) designation.